Listen respectfully:

The compassionate World Honored One, with the purity of the five eyes, radiant and wonderful features, introduces the teachings of the Five Vehicles, and preaches the profound principles of prajna wisdom. Fifty-five saints and sages, in thought after thought, have attained the fruit of bodhi enlightenment. The Mahasattvas (Great Ones) of the five roots (sense organs) and five powers, have been liberated from causal existence. By taking refuge [in the Three Jewels], we increase our field of blessings; by paying homage and reciting [the sutras], we eradicate our sins and defilements. In stillness and tranquility, we will thoroughly realize [the Way]. May the Buddha bestow his compassionate light upon us and certify our repentance. We make repentance in this compassionate place of cultivation and recite Scroll five, giving the reasons for this repentance liturgy.

We offer lamps, candles, fruit, and flowers to all the Buddhas, saints, and sages, and praise their great names. We prostrate, take refuge, and wholeheartedly make repentance for all our offences from previous kalpas until today. Deluded by the arising and ceasing of the five skandhas, we cycle through the five turbidities. We are entangled by the five desires, and obstructed by the five dusts. We have not eradicated the five rebellious acts, and have given rise to attachments and hatred. We have not understood the five wisdoms (laws) thus increasing our vexations. The law of causality never fails, and one cannot escape from karmic retributions.

In today's Dharma assembly, we, who have common karma, all have harbored enmity toward others. How do we know this? If there is no enmity there will be no evil destinies. Now, the evil paths are endless and the three evil realms are continuously on fire; therefore, we know that enmity among people is endless. The sutra says that all sentient beings have this mind and each one can become a Buddha. However, the minds of sentient beings are deluded. We cling to the mundane world and do not know how to transcend it. We create the causes of suffering and nurture the seeds of ill-will.

That is why we transmigrate in the three realms and traverse through the six existences. We are continually being reborn. Why? From beginningless time, all sentient beings are surrounded by darkness, cloaked with ignorance, drowning in desire and lust. The three poisonous roots (greed, hatred, and ignorance) give rise to four perversions and ten vexations. Attachment to self gives rise to the five erroneous views. The five erroneous views give rise to the sixty-two views. Through body, speech, and mind, sentient beings commit the ten evil deeds. The three evil deeds of the body include killing, stealing, and sexual misconduct. The four evils of the mouth include lying, malicious, abusive, and frivolous speech. The three evils of the mind include greed, hatred, and ignorance. Not only do we commit these ten evil deeds but we also ask others to do the same. We praise the ten evil deeds and those who commit them. Therefore, body, speech, and mind give rise to the forty evils.

In addition, our six sense organs crave the six sense objects, opening the door to eighty-four thousand defilements. One instant of thought can give rise to sixty-two views and cause forty evils. One instant of thought can open the door to eighty-four thousand defilements. How much more then are the number of offenses one can accumulate in one day, in one month, in one year, in one lifetime, and in all lifetimes through countless kalpas? These offenses are boundless and incalculable, and enmities between people are endless. Sentient beings are filled with ignorance. Ignorance obscures their wisdom, and vexations cloud the mind. Because we do not realize this, our thoughts are deluded. We do not believe the teachings in the sutras. We do not follow the Buddha's words. We do not seek to resolve enmities among ourselves and do not hope to be liberated.

We plunge ourselves into the evil paths just as a moth that flies into a flame. We suffer endlessly through the long night of successive kalpas. When the retribution for bad karma ends and we are reborn in the human realm, we still commit evil deeds and do not correct our actions. Therefore, all the saints give rise to great compassionate minds to help sentient beings who harbor enmity toward each other. We should also give rise to the bodhi mind, and cultivate the bodhisattva way. The bodhisattvas mahasattvas regard saving those who suffer as their sustenance, and resolving enmities as their important practice. They do not abandon sentient beings; enduring suffering is their essential characteristic. Today, we also hope to do the same; we hope to give rise to a valiant and compassionate mind equal to the mind of Tathagata. Relying on the Buddhas' power, we raise the banners of the Dharma assembly and beat the drums of the sweet dew. We pull the bows of wisdom and wield the arrows of determination.

We want to dissolve the enmity among sentient beings of the four forms of birth, the six existences, the three periods of time, as well as those of our parents, teachers, families and relatives. May we renounce all past enmities that have been formed, as well as enmities that have not yet been formed. May all Buddhas and great bodhisattvas guide and protect us through the power of their compassion, their original vows, and supernatural powers. Starting today until we attain bodhi, may all enmities be resolved, all bonds be released, and animosities never recur. May all suffering be extinguished. On behalf of all sentient beings from the four forms of births, six existences, and three periods of time, as well as our parents, teachers, families and relatives, we prostrate with utmost sincerity, and take refuge in the most compassionate father of the world.

Again, we take refuge in the Three Jewels in the ten directions and vast space. Through the power of the Buddhas, the Dharma, the saints and sages, we pray that all sentient beings who have formed enmities in the six existences will be liberated. May we all diligently cultivate virtuous conducts and eliminate all evil deeds, resolve to attain the Mahayana mind, practice the bodhisattva way, achieve the four immeasurable sates of mind and the six paramitas, transcend the cycle of birth and death, and attain enlightenment. In today's Dharma assembly, we, who have common karma, ask what are the root causes of enmity and suffering? The eyes crave forms. The ears crave sounds. The nose craves fragrances. The tongue craves tastes. The body craves the soft and smooth. We are constantly entangled by the five sense objects. This is why we cannot liberate ourselves for many kalpas. Next, our families and friends are the roots of resentment and enmity in the three periods of time. All resentments and enmity arise from intimate relationships.

If there is no intimacy, there is no resentment and enmity. By avoiding intimacy, one avoids resentments and enmity. Why? If people live in different places, far away from each other, they can never form enmities with each other. All resentments and enmity are due to intimacy. Due to the three poisonous roots, we create afflictions when we interact with each other. These afflictions then cause hatred between people. That is why there are always complaints about one another among family members and relatives. Parents complain about their children. Children complain about their parents. Brothers and sisters complain about each other. The more complaints we have, the more resentful we become. Minor disagreements give rise to anger and hatred. If we possess wealth and fortune, relatives will compete to get it. If we are poor, we have less worries. Those who have much feel that it is too little. The more one has, the greedier one becomes.

When we get everything we ask for, we are not grateful for its source. Once we do not get what we want, we immediately become angry and resentful, giving rise to evil thoughts and a calculating mind, creating countless enemies and troubles, life after life. Based upon this, our enemies of the past, present, and future lives are not strangers but our families and friends. Therefore, we should know that families and friends are indeed the source of resentment and enmity. Consequently, we should earnestly make repentance for our faults, and prostrate wholeheartedly. Today, we make repentance on behalf of all who we have formed enmity with since we had consciousness through countless kalpas until today, including those who were our parents, those in the realms of hells, animals, hungry ghosts, asuras, human beings, heavenly beings, and immortals in the three periods of time.

Again, we take refuge in the Three Jewels in the ten directions and the vast space. We pray that, through the power of the Buddha, the Dharma, and the bodhisattvas, all our past parents, families, and relatives in the six existences who have resented or hated each other, will come to this Dharma assembly. Together, at this place of cultivation, we make repentance for our past offenses and hope to dissolve all enmities. If there is anyone who cannot come due to the limitation of their present form, we pray that the power of the Three Jewels can bring their spirits here. [May the Three Jewels], in their compassion, accept our repentance today, and may all enmities be resolved.

Due to our three poisonous roots, we have committed the ten evil deeds. We had neither understanding nor faith and did not cultivate good deeds. Due to our ignorance, we caused enmity among our parents and relatives, even forming enemies in the six existences. These offenses are countless and boundless.

These offences will cause enmity in future lives. Today, we are deeply remorseful, and tearfully reprimand ourselves. We resolve to correct our past offences and never commit them again. We resolve to treat our parents, families and relatives with a gentle mind, a reconciliatory mind, a sympathetic mind, a joyful mind, a protective mind, and the mind of the Tathagata. Today, we repent and make offerings with no differentiation between enemies and friends. We also hope that the enemies of our parents, families and relatives in the six existences, will generously forgive them all and that all enmities will immediately end.

Starting now until we attain bodhi/enlightenment, we hope to be forever freed from the three evil realms and the sufferings of the four evil realms. We hope that all relationships will be in harmony like water mixed with milk, that there will be no obstructions, just like the vast and empty space, and we will always be part of a compassionate Dharma family. We hope that each of us will study and cultivate infinite wisdom and accomplish all merits and virtues. We will vigorously and diligently practice the bodhisattva way without resting or stopping because of exhaustion. We resolve to attain the same mind as all the Buddhas and the same vows of all the Buddhas, achieve the mystical body, mouth, and mind of the Tathagata, be replete with the five attributes of the Dharmakaya, and finally attain supreme enlightenment.

In today's Dharma assembly, we, who have common karma, after having resolved the enmities of our parents, should resolve the enmities of our teachers and elders. After the Buddha entered nirvana, we still have not been able to attain absolute perfection and the tolerance of non-arising dharmas, and are still going through the changes of the three forms. The Tathagata taught the truth of suffering so all sentient beings can be enlightened to the truth. The virtuous ones yet taught the sentient beings by manifest literal explanation, how can the common and ignorant ones realize the absolute state of purity without any teaching? When we are still intermixing good and evil deeds and cannot understand the difference, how can we be immediately freed from creating the three karmic offenses? Upon hearing this, we should be grateful to our teachers and elders, be remorseful, not be fearful or have any doubts or devious thoughts.

The sutra says that even if one embraces the monastic life, one is not yet liberated. Even though one is a monastic, one should not say that one commits any more evil deeds or that a lay person does not do any good deeds. As mentioned in the sutras, the Buddha told the assembly that they should be mindful of the kindness of teachers and elders. Although our parents have raised us, taught and guided us, they cannot help us to escape from the three evil realms. It is the compassion of the teachers and elders that encouraged the youth to enter the monastic life and to take the precepts. The seeds of the arhat will bear the fruit of arhathood. One can then transcend the cycle of life and death and attain the bliss of nirvana. How can people repay the transcendental and virtuous kindness of their teachers? If we can cultivate the Way for a whole lifetime, we can benefit ourselves but still cannot repay the kindness of our teachers. The Buddha said that all the good friends in the world cannot benefit us more than our teachers.

In today's Dharma assembly, we, who have common karma, were told by the Buddha, that our teachers and elders have great beneficence and virtues, but we have not resolved to repay their kindness. They have repeatedly taught and admonished us, but we have not followed and upheld their teachings. We even scolded and slandered them. We stirred up trouble to cause the Dharma to decline. With such offenses, how can we escape the three evil realms? No one can substitute for us in enduring our retributive sufferings. When life ends, happiness is gone, and suffering arrives. Our consciousness is miserable and confused. Our six consciousnesses are dull and the five sense organs deteriorate. When we want to walk, we cannot move our feet. When we want to sit, we cannot sit up straight. When we want to listen to the Dharma, our ears cannot hear. When we want to enjoy the beautiful scenery, our eyes cannot see.

We should then realize that today's repentance ceremony is a rare opportunity that does not come often. There are hells with endless sufferings. The sorrowful retributions are the result of our own actions. Therefore, the sutra says that ignorant and arrogant people do not believe in calamities and disasters. They slander, attack, hate, and envy their teachers. These people are the great demons of the Dharma and the seeds of the hells. They entangle themselves in the knots of enmity and suffer endless retributions.

Bhiksuu Hua Guang who was eloquent in preaching Dharma had a disciple, who was arrogant and did not have faith in his master's teaching. He said: "My master is devoid of wisdom, but he can praise the illusive and empty things. I hope that I will never see him again in my future lives." Then the disciple talked about the Dharma as non-Dharma, and non-Dharma as the Dharma. Although he kept the precepts and did not violate them, because he distorted the truth, after he died, like an arrow, he fell into the Avici Hell and underwent intense suffering for trillions of kalpas.

In today's Dharma assembly, we, who have common karma, after reading what the sutra says, should give rise to great fear. Such a monk after speaking a malicious word, fell into the Avici Hell and suffered for trillions of kalpas. Since a novice entered the monastic life, although he practiced with his master, the offences of his evil deeds were immeasurable. He is no different from the previous disciple. Why? His teachers continuously taught and guided him, but he did not practice according to the Dharma. He disregarded all his teachers and elders. The masters were angry at the disciple, and the disciple hated the master. In the three periods of time, there was immeasurable joy as well as anger. Such offences are countless.

The sutra says that when the mind gives rise to a single thought of anger, it causes countless enmities. These enmities are not only among our families and friends, but they are even more intense between the masters and their disciples. Again, we live in the same dwelling and sit next to each other. We do not believe that to leave home for the monastery is to renounce the world. We do not know that practicing tolerance brings peace and happiness. We do not know that equality is the bodhi way. We do not know that to be free of deluded thoughts is a mind that transcends the world. The masters and disciples live under the same roof and their common karma has not ended. They find fault in each other and often give rise to conflicts. That is why, from lifetime to lifetime, they cannot live in harmony. In addition, monastics give rise to hatred when they see their fellow cultivators or teachers advance in their practice.

They do not praise the virtuous and are content to be ignorant. They hate each other and do not realize their own faults. They speak of the shortcomings of others. With the three poisons, they slander each other. They neither have loyalty nor respect. They never recite, "I have broken the Buddha's precepts." They even loudly scold others using malicious words. They do not follow or uphold the teachings of their masters and elders. People sitting in the same room hate each other. This hatred stirs up more troubles. There is much enmity in the evil paths. They do not think that one who has studied and practiced wisdom day and night has merits and virtues while they themselves do not have good roots. Those with a defiled mind give rise to conflicts and discriminations, and are seldom able to live in harmony with others.

These enemies are all our masters and disciples. Fellow cultivators who live together and sit in the same room give rise to a mind of hatred, causing endless enmity. Thus, the sutras say, "A little hatred and envy in this life will intensify in the next life and cause great enmities. How much more enmity is created in a whole lifetime! In today's Dharma assembly, we, who have common karma, do not know in which existence we created enmity with our masters and all our elders, peers, and juniors. Such enmities are endless and boundless, lasting for endless years or countless kalpas. When we suffer from them, the pain is unbearable.

Therefore, the great bodhisattvas extinguish feelings of enmity in their mind and thoughts. They protect and accept everyone equally with a mind of compassion. Today we have already given rise to the bodhi mind and the bodhi vow. We should learn to cultivate the bodhisattva way, the four immeasurable states of mind, the six paramitas, the four great vows, and the four all-embracing virtues. We should cultivate the conduct of all the Buddhas and bodhisattvas. Today, we should treat our loved ones and enemies equally, without any obstructions. From today until we attain bodhi, we resolve to save and protect all sentient beings. May all sentient beings follow the One Great Vehicle. Together, we prostrate with utmost sincerity.

Again, we take refuge in the Three Jewels in the ten directions and vast space. Relying on the power of the Buddhas, the Dharma, bodhisattvas of the earth, and saints, we make repentance for the countless enmities of sentient beings in the three periods of time, in all the Dharma realms, whether they are right or wrong, and hope that they will untangle the knots of enmity, renounce all these offences without discrimination between loved ones or enemies. May all live harmoniously, like water mixed with milk. May all be filled with joy, like the bodhisattvas in the first stage of practice. May there be no obstructions, like the empty space.

We vow to fulfill the six paramitas and to practice and perfect the ten stages and vows of the bodhisattva. May we achieve the Buddha's ten supernatural powers without obstructions, and attain supreme unsurpassed enlightenment. In today's Dharma assembly, we, who have common karma, know that the previous passages are just general descriptions to help sentient beings of the three periods of time to resolve and untangle the knots of enmity. We must first purify and control our own minds. Why are we not yet liberated today? This is because we have not obtained the Buddha's prediction [to attain enlightenment] or heard a single word [The one-sound teaching] of the Buddha's preaching.

This is a result of our deep karmic offenses and stubborn knots of resentment. We were not able to see the Buddhas, bodhisattvas, saints, and sages in previous and current lives. We were also afraid that that Buddha's twelve divisions of the canon would not touch our minds. It is difficult to avoid our enemies in the evil paths. After we relinquish our bodies and lives, we drown in the turbulent sea again. We have transmigrated in the three evil destinies, traversing in all the evil realms. We did not know when we would regain the human form. When we think about it, we feel intense pain and are deeply sorrowful.

Since we have already lived the simple life together, left families and friends, renounced the honor and glory of the world, and do not have other causal relationships, why are we not racing against time to find peace? If our resolve is not strong, and we are not tolerant in adversity, when we suddenly become severely ill, the intermediate stage between death and rebirth manifests. The prison guards from the hells, the raksasas, ox-headed torturers, and all kinds of bizarre creatures will come. Wind like knives will cut up our bodies, and our minds will be terrified and distraught. Our families and friends will weep but we will not know why they are weeping.

At that time how can we give rise to one good thought from today's repentance? Countless sentient beings are enduring infinite suffering in the three evil paths. Today, we should each work hard and race against time. If we act impulsively, we will progress slowly. If we are diligent and tolerant of suffering, we will swiftly achieve a valiant mind. Therefore, the sutra says, compassion is the place of enlightenment, because we have endured sufferings with tolerance. Taking action is the place of enlightenment, because we have accomplished our tasks. Perfecting myriads of good deeds can only be accomplished by diligence. Crossing a great sea cannot be accomplished without a boat."

If we wish to have a mind of joy, but do not take action toward obtaining this joy, our minds are not in harmony with our practice and we will not obtain results. It is like a person on a starvation diet who cannot satisfy his hunger while he is craving all kinds of flavorful foods. Therefore, if we seek superior retribution, our mind and practice must be in agreement. Today, we strengthen our mind toward attaining enlightenment, are remorseful, make repentance for our karmic offenses, and untangle the knots of all enmity. May we be freed from the endless ignorance of the dark realms. We hope that everyone will be liberated and will have no regrets. Together, with utmost sincerity, we prostrate and take refuge in the most compassionate father of the world.

Again, we take refuge in the Three Jewels of the ten directions and vast space. Our accumulated karmic offenses are as deep as the earth. We are cloaked by ignorance and have not awakened for long nights. We created enmities due to the three poisons, causing us to transmigrate endlessly in the three realms, never being able to escape. Today, relying on the great compassionate and merciful power of the Buddhas and bodhisattvas, we are finally awakened. Our minds give rise to remorse and we sincerely pray that we will be repentant. May all the Buddhas and bodhisattvas accept our plea.

May they lead all mutual enemies of the four births and six existences to enlightenment. We hope that there will be no discrimination between enemies and friends. We hope that all enmities will be dissolved and that we will be eternally free from the eight difficulties and the sufferings of the four evil destinies. We vow to always follow all the Buddhas, listen to their teachings, be awakened to the Way, give rise to the bodhi mind, and cultivate the transcendent path. We vow to deeply practice the four immeasurable states of mind and the six paramitas. May all our conduct and vows be equal to those of the bodhisattvas in the tenth stage. May we enter the vajra mind and attain supreme enlightenment.

In today's Dharma assembly, we, who have common karma, know that enmities are caused by the three karmas and that offenders suffer the retributions. We all know that this is the root of our suffering. We should vigorously eradicate it. Only by making repentance can we eradicate suffering. Therefore, the sutras praise two types of strong people in our world. Ones who do not commit offenses and others who can make repentance for their faults. Today, if we wish to make repentance, we should cleanse our mind and rectify our appearance. Inwardly, we are repentant; outwardly, we show remorse. If we give rise to the two minds, there are no faults that cannot be eliminated.

What are these two minds? The first is the mind of shame. The second is the mind of regret. One who feels ashamed can offer repentance to heaven; one who is regretful can offer repentance to people. One who feels ashamed can repent to eradicate various enmities; one who is regretful can teach others to untangle all their knots. One who feels ashamed can do many good deeds; one who is regretful rejoices at others' good deeds. One who feels ashamed is humble inwardly; one who is regretful shows remorse outwardly to others. Therefore, these two minds help practitioners to attain unobstructed joy. Today, with great shame and remorse, we make profound repentance. We sincerely beg sentient beings in the four births and six existences for forgiveness. Why?

The sutras say: "All sentient beings are related. They can be our parents, teachers, elders, brothers, sisters, or other relatives." We fell into the net of ignorance and did not know this; therefore, we had many afflictions. Afflictions give rise to countless enemies. We are now awakened to this truth; our minds are very sincere. One single thought can move the Buddhas in the ten directions; our one sincere prostration can eradicate countless enmities. Together, with utmost sincerity, we prostrate and take refuge in the most compassionate father of the world.

Again, we take refuge in the Three Jewels in the ten directions and vast space. We pray that the Three Jewels will protect us. We pray that what we repented can be eradicated and what we regretted can be purified. We pray that all those who make repentance with us today, from now until attaining bodhi, will be freed from all their resentment and enmities. May all sufferings be alleviated, and all accumulated bad habits and afflictions be purified. We hope to be forever freed from the four evil destinies and to have rebirths only at will. We vow to serve all the Buddhas and hope to receive their approval. We vow to practice the six paramitas and four immeasurable states of mind. May we have the four skills of eloquence and the ten powers of the Buddha. May we achieve the Buddha's good characteristics, majestic body, and supernatural powers without obstructions. May we achieve the vajra mind and attain supreme enlightenment.

The Buddha's wonderful majestic body shines like the sun high up in the sky; it is like the stirring of a compassionate breeze and like the thunder of spring awakening the earth. He showers sweet dew upon the minds of defiled beings, imparting his wisdom to the worlds as numerous as the sands of the Ganges River. He responds to all our pleas and aspirations. The brightness of the Tathagata's five eyes imparts thorough understanding at all times to those who do the Buddha's work. We now practice the compassionate repentance and are about to finish Scroll five. In completing our ceremony and chanting, we are about to perfect our merits.

May we accumulate the five virtues, and respectfully observe the wonderful characteristics of the five heavens. We burn five kinds of incense and light the torch of five kinds of wisdom. From one gatha of praise, flowers of five colors appear. We offer food as our humble gift; we pay homage to the Buddha in admiration. Contemplating and reciting the sutras confers extraordinary merits. We first dedicate our merits to the Buddha, and then spread them universally to all beings in the Dharma realm. We now make repentance for all the sins which we have not yet repented, and create excellent causes.

May our current relatives enjoy the five kinds of blessings and our past relatives achieve the knowledge of the five sciences. May all sentient beings who flounder in the dark realms be freed from the wheel of suffering and attain enlightenment. May those who hate us resolve the bonds of enmity and together with us, be reborn in the virtuous paths. We have now completed scroll five of the Liang Huang Repentance Liturgy. We dedicate our merits to our four benefactors and all those in the three realms. May we obtain longevity and increased blessings through this repentance. May the Dharma waters cleanse our offences. May all the deceased enter the Western Pure Land. May the bodhisattva of the fifth stage compassionately receive us.
